An exchange gives excellent advice in advising the people to patronize the merchant who advertises. You do not visit your neighbor unless asked to call, and you do not attend a party or wedding without an invitation; then why intrude on the privacy of a store keeper without an invitation? Buy of the live business man who not only invites you to come and see him every day, but educates and keeps you posted as to what is new and popular in his line of goods. Advertisements and advertisers are the greatest educators of the age, and he who never reads an advertisement lives in the back woods, fastens his suspenders with a shingle nail, and has not had a haircut or a shave since Jackson licked bloody bloomin' British at New Orleans.

Why should the spirit of mortal be proud, or the millionaire stick up his nose?—for whatever you earn by crook or by turn, on the first of the new year it goes. You may curtail your fun and deny yourself sport, peg on along sticks and shuffle along in old shoes, but at the sight of your bills you realize your ills, and every "square" man has his bills.
